A row of two-story wood-frame barracks line the parade field on Casey’s south campus. These buildings once housed the enlisted military personnel stationed here during World Wars I & II. Now these barracks, referred to as company quarters, are available as sleeping facilities and can host groups of 35-475.

Company Quarters H & J were remodeled in 2001 to create dorm-like accommodations and to allow wheelchair access to both floors. Each of these facilities can host groups of 22-35. Each floor has a central hallway, with private rooms on either side. The rooms contain twin beds and a dresser. The bathrooms are centrally located and have wheelchair-accessible toilets, sinks and showers.

At the end of each upper floor is a generously sized meeting space. The rooms are lined with sofa seating. Café tables and chairs are set in the center. An extended deck and staircase is located off each of these meeting rooms, and, as these are the two barracks closest to the water, the views of Admiralty Inlet are expansive and spectacular.
