Seasoned recruiters and other leaders can be heard to say, “Hire for attitude; train for skill.” Personal and professional values not only help shape our attitudes, they are also closely linked to our character. We’ve been called to consider the “content of their character”—but just what is character? How does it develop? How can you assess character formation?

In this interactive session, led by Dr. Lorie Wild, you will
1. Learn about the elements of “character” and character formation.
2. Deepen your understanding of environments in which good character flourishes.
3. Explore ways to uncover character in yourself and others.

ABOUT LORIE WILD

Lorie Wild, PhD, RN, NEA-BC is Dean and Professor in the School of Health Sciences at Seattle Pacific University. In working with faculty and students in the Lydia Green Nursing Program, she builds upon nearly three decades of nursing practice and leadership to ensure a robust academic atmosphere and relationship-centered learning and practice guarantee that graduates are exceptional practitioners poised to provide compassionate, evidence-based clinical care and to be leaders in our profession.

PROGRAM SCHEDULE: MARCH 1, 2013

8:30-9:00 a.m.
Registration & Set-up

9:00-9:15 a.m.
Welcome and Introductions
Kelly Marley, MSN, RN Associate Dean, School of Health Sciences

9:15-10:00 a.m.
“Hire for Attitude Character”
Lorie Wild, PhD, RN, NEA-BC

10:00-10:15 a.m.
Break

10:15-11:00 a.m.
“Hire for Attitude Character” (continued)

11:00-12:00
Lunch

12:00-2:00 p.m.
Meet with students and RNs

COST AND ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

The fee for this event is $200 (morning coffee and lunch is included). Each additional participant from the same facility may attend for $25 per person.

FOR MORE INFORMATION, contact Julie Ann Harrington at 206-281-2606 or email harrij@spu.edu.
Send faxes to 206-281-2767

Register online at https://advance.spu.edu/events/select_SHS.asp