And more!

💡 Happy National Student Employment Month! 💡

In honor of National Student Employment Appreciation Month (April), your friends at SPU's Office of Student Employment have written you a humble little poem:

We know that working while being a student,
it isn't always easy.

Sometimes it is not fun.

But we appreciate everything you do,
Everything under the sun!

SPU's On-Campus Student Employee of the Year:

Lena Rajani

In her 12 months of service to Student Financial Services (SFS) as the SFS Counseling Assistant, Lena has exceeded her supervisor's expectations many times. She is "reliable, highly motivated, creative, and works well with very little supervision, completing her work quickly and with a high level of accuracy." Perhaps one of the most helpful skills she brings to SFS is her ability to take on complicated projects with little supervision needed and complete them quickly and accurately and always with a positive attitude. Lena's supervisor also values her "self-starter attitude" which led her to create an electronic procedure manual for her position when her supervisor was unavailable and she had already completed her assigned tasks. Please join us in congratulating Lena on her hard work, and thanking her for the contributions she makes to her office and the university!

SPU's On-Campus Runner Up:

Stephanie Kato

Stephanie has been employed with SPU's Athletic Department for nearly four years. In her nomination letter she is described as "a care provider in the field of sports medicine who is an example of service and dedication among her peers and an inspiration to her supervisors." She is extremely reliable and flexible – a "virtue" in this profession. She has also taken initiative and after learning the daily operation of athletic training, she took on administrative tasks that have never been required of her position but greatly benefit the department. Her supervisor says her contributions "are so great she is like having a full time administrative assistant." When she is working in the athletic training room, Stephanie's "personal investment into the welfare of our patients demonstrates that she has a genuine interest and that she is there for more than just a job." Congratulations Stephanie!

SPU's Off-Campus Student Employee of the Year:

Maleena Taing

Since January 2012, Maleena has worked at Hilltop Children's Center with increasing responsibility. Her supervisor emphasizes "her strengths as a reflective and analytical thinker, problem solver, and relationship builder" as she has served in administrative support as well as a Support Teacher and Substitute Teacher. She is now Hilltop's most requested Substitute Teacher because of the dedication and high quality of work that she delivers – "teachers know that when she is in the classroom they have a trusted teammate who follows through, takes initiative, and can handle whatever is thrown her way in an often chaotic and dynamic environment." To tie her job to her major, Maleena created a self-designed psychology internship where she identified children with atypical needs and developed individualized support plans. She has "built deep and meaningful relationships with the kids that we serve, adapting her teaching style and approach to meet the individual needs and strengths of each child". In the office she has taken initiative to implement and maintain a new records system which provides "invaluable data." In addition, Maleena "is a rare find" and Hilltop is "lucky to have her as a member of [their] working team and community". Thank you Maleena for your dedication to kids and to your community!
