Federal Community Service jobs improve the quality of life for community residents, particularly low-income individuals, and help to solve particular problems related to their needs. Community Service positions are paid using Federal Work Study funding.

A common Community Service job is tutoring! Last academic year, SPU had 22 math tutors and 13 literacy tutors who participated in the Community Service Program. Depending on how many hours a student was able work each week, they could earn up to $4,000 during the school year!
